GOEBEL'S SLAYER REFERRED TO IN POWERS' RECENT STATEMENT NAMED

In Sensational Affidavit of Mrs. Lula Clark.

Turner Igo did the Shooting at Instance of Son of Late John Sanford.

Richmond, Ind., Sept. 21.—Turner Igo, of Farmers, Rowan county, Ky., is charged with the killing of Senator William Goebel, of Kentucky, in an affidavit by Mrs. Lula Clark, which was published exclusively by the Richmond, Ind., Evening Item to-day. In Mrs. Clark's affidavit, which was taken at Indianapolis on April 11, 1907, in the law office of ex-Gov. W. S. Taylor, of Kentucky, she says her maiden name was Lula Williams and she was born at Rothwell, Menifee, county, Ky., but lived most of her life and at the time of Goebel's murder her home was at Mount Sterling, Ky. She is a niece of Judge Frank Day, of Frenchburg, Ky., and also of James Williams, of the same place. She has a cousin named Gertrude King, who lived at Maysville at the time of Goebel's murder. Miss King was at that time keeping company with John Sanford, of Covington, Ky.

Upon the day of Goebel's murder the two girls went to Frankfort, Ky. They started to enter the State House by the rear entrance and then on the steps a shot was fired. At the same time they noticed a man standing just inside the door, whom they recognized as Sanford. In a minute a second man came running out of the building dressed like a mountaineer, and carrying a rifle. He ran to Sanford and said: "I go the ———." That man was recognized by the affiant as her friend, Turner Igo, of Farmers, Rowan county, Ky. Both men ran out of the building to a fence, where Sanford gave a pair of shoes which he was carrying to Igo, who exchanged his boots for them. The affiant states that Igo told her at the Mt. Sterling depot on January 25, 1900, that he was going to kill Goebel, and that she saw him afterwards at Jeffersonville, Ind., and he reminded her that he had fulfilled his promise.

She also says that Sanford had told Gertrude King a few days prior to Goebel's murder that he intended to kill Goebel, saying "there is my chance to get revenge. The Legislature has met."

STANFORD IN FAR EAST.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 21.—The John Sanford mentioned in the Richmond, Ind., dispatch is a son of the late Attorney John Sanford, who was killed by William Goebel during a political fight in Covington, Ky., some years ago. Goebel was acquitted, but young Sanford was many times quoted as threatening to "get even," and has even been suspected of the murder, although direct evidence was lacking. His mother, wife of the dead man, is at present in a sanitarium in Lexington, her mind having given way after the strain. Several times she has been quoted as having declared that her son had killed Goebel, but owing to her mental condition and the lack of corroborating evidence, these statements were not generally regarded as worthy of credence. Young Sanford has not been at home for about two years, but is understood to have gone to China, and is now somewhere in the Far East.

SANFORD IN FAR EAST.

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 21.—W. S. Taylor, whom the Kentucky authorities charge with having had a hand in the Goebel murder, expressed regret to-night that the information given privately in his office two years ago had come to light. He pointed out that publication at that time might make verification impossible. He urged that nothing be printed, because he hoped to locate the woman who was with Mrs. Clark.

Taylor regarded the woman's story as valuable, inasmuch as it tended to prove that Goebel's murder was the outcome of a personal feud, rather than of a political conspiracy. This had been Taylor's contention from the very beginning. Preliminary to the first trial of Caleb Powers, friends of the Secretary of State had sought to establish the fact that John Sanford was in Frankfort on the day of the shooting. The King girl was said to have recognized one of the two men running from the Executive building as Sanford.

Efforts to establish Sanford's presence in the city on the memorable day failed, although one man was found who swore to having seen Sanford on an in-bound Frankfort train that morning in company with a stranger who answered the description given by the Clark woman as that of the man with Sanford when the two dashed from the Executive building following the crack of the rifle used by the assassin of Goebel.

The deposition of Mrs. Clark said that the shot appeared to have been fired from a first-floor room of the Executive building, and Mr. Taylor brought out in his questioning that this room was some distance away from that occupied by Powers as an office, and from which the fatal shot was thought by many to have been fired.

So gratified was Taylor with the testimony of the Clark woman that he immediately made efforts to locate the King girl, that she might verify these statements and fill them in with statements of her own.

The story of the Clark woman was to the effect that on the day Goebel was shot she was in Frankfort in company with a young woman friend who lived in a nearby town. The two had gone to the Kentucky capitol to visit the Legislature. Approaching the Executive building they heard the sharp crack of a rifle, and immediately thereafter two men, dressed in characteristic Kentucky garb, ran down the steps, thence around the building to an obscure byway and entered a curtilaged buggy, which was in waiting, whereupon they drove rapidly away, stopping only long enough for one of the men to pull off a pair of shoes and put on a pair of boots of the kind used by Kentucky mountaineers.

According to the Clark woman's statements, she and her friend were greatly alarmed by the exciting scenes which followed the shooting, and they decided that it was best for them to return to the little town whence they had come. This they did, taking the first train that afternoon. Newspapers read by them on the homeward journey told of the horrible crime that had been committed, and the Clark woman's friend, according to the deposition, cautioned her against saying anything about the two having been near the scene for fear that they might become involved. The woman feared being held as a witness, inasmuch as she was to leave the following day for Des Moines, Ia., to marry a man of that city. The next day the Clark woman returned to Indiana and her friend took a train for Des Moines.

Within a few days Mrs. Clark also left this part of the country, and she knew nothing about the stirring incidents following the murder until perhaps two years later, when she came back to this State. Then she learned of the fate of Caleb Powers, Youtsey and Howard and the flight from their State of Taylor, Finley and other officials. Being convinced that the Goebel assassination was the outcome of a personal feud rather than of a political conspiracy, as had been generally accepted in Kentucky, the Clark woman thought it her duty to speak. Accordingly her story was told to a newspaper man, who in turn repeated it to Taylor.

POWERS' STATEMENT.

Caleb Powers said to-night over the telephone in his cell at Geragotau concerning the story from Indiana:

"I have been in possession of Mrs. Clark's affidavit for some time, but have not made it public because I did not think the time was ripe. I do not care to say nothing further about it. I never knew either Mrs. Clark or Igo."

Powers did not seem to be pleased with the publication of the story, as it is understood he had intended to spring it as a sensation at his next trial. It is said that Powers referred to Igo and based the statement he recently made that he had discovered who killed Goebel on the affidavit of Mrs. Clark, which he had in his possession at that time.

DENIED BY SANFORD.

Friends of Sanford deny that he was in Frankfort at the time Goebel was killed or that he knew anything about it. On the other hand, we are informed by C. P. Keown, ex-Sheriff of Ohio county, that he was in Frankfort on the Saturday night before the killing, and a gentleman offered to introduce him to young Sanford, but when they went to the Frankfort Hotel, where he was stopping, the clerk informed them that he had just stepped out.

SLIM CROWD HEARS LAFOON.

Speaker Drags out Race Question and Goebel's Ghost.

Appeal to Prejudice and Passion Full of Misrepresentation.

Hon. Ruby Lafoon, Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, spoke here Tuesday to probably the smallest audience that ever greeted a candidate for a State office at Hartford. By actual count there were only 51 persons present, 14 of whom were Republicans and two colored. Only 3 persons were present who came to the speaking from the country and one of them drove Mr. Lafoon over from Beaver Dam.

The speaker began his speech with an appeal to race prejudice and ended with the worst sort of demagoguery by an appeal to the poor as against the rich. In one breath he charged that the Republicans would, if given power, be compelled to recognize the colored people because, as he claimed, 80,000 of them vote the Republican ticket in Kentucky, and in the next he declared the Republicans had only used the negro as a "hewer of wood and drawer of water" and had never given them any "pic." To use his own expression, this looked to some of his audience like "blowing hot and cold." To cap the climax on the negro question he next told his hearers that Gov. Bradley had, while Governor, placed a negro steward over the inmates of the Hopkinsville Asylum, when in truth Judge Alex. Anderson, a white man, was Stewart at Hopkinsville during the entire term of Gov. Bradley.

This was, however, about in keeping with his accuracy when he stated that Bradley had appointed Deboe Senator, and then forced his election by surrounding the State House with bayonets. Everybody knows that Bradley never appointed Deboe to any position in his life and also, as the writer, who was a member of the House at the time, knows that Deboe was elected at the special session of the Legislature in 1897, when there was not a soldier on the State House square, and had not been for a year.

Mr. Lafoon devoted a large share of his speech to the Goebel assassination, which he evidently considered second in importance as a vote getting theme to the negro domination tirade, neither of which elicited any interest or applause among his auditors, who are tired of hearing these matters thrashed over every year to keep a set of men in power who don't care a fig for either. He justified the theft of the State offices in 1899 by the old charge of soldiers at the polls and "tissue" ballots in Republican counties, neglecting to tell his hearers, however, that the identical paper was used by the same printer for the ballots in Graves and other large Democratic counties. His charge in this connection that Gov. Bradley marched through the streets of Louisville at the head of soldiers is absolutely untrue. It is a matter of history that no member of the State Guard in Louisville was on the streets on that day in uniform until seven o'clock p. m., three hours after the polls closed, and then a squad of seven went to some precinct, at the urgent request of a Democratic Circuit Judge, to enforce an order which he had made on the election officers to allow a Republican Inspector to be present at the count. Mr. "Laughoon" must have thought the people of Ohio county very ignorant when he attempted to befuddle them with such glaring misrepresentations.

Only a small part of the speaker's valuable (?) time could be spared from the all-impending negro question, and the Goebel funeral oration, to talk about State finances. He admitted the excessive print bill but blamed it all on ex-Attorney General Pratt who he claimed passed on it, and said it was regular. However, he did not contend that Mr. Pratt had anything to do with letting the contract. The truth is, and Mr. Lafoon knew it, if he knows anything, Pratt only passed on the question of whether the State was legally bound to pay the bill, after it had been incurred.

No records were produced to prove any of the board claims made by the speaker with reference to the State's finances, but his hearers were always referred to the records at Frankfort, with a flourish of his hand as though that ought to clinch any sort of argument.

The people will remember the condition Kentucky was in when Bradley became Governor. The State had suspended payment on all warrants, and an outstanding indebtedness had accumulated amounting to $1,700,000. This had to be provided for by an increase in taxation, but the same law provided that it should drop back to the old rate, when the debts had been met, which was 42½ cents on the dollar. However the Democrats increased it to 50 cents, where it has since remained.

Mr. Lafoon neglected to tell his audience how he stood on the county unit question, although he undertook to criticize Mr. Willson's position on that law. He also neglected to tell about the infamous gerrymander, by his party, of the legislative districts, or the increase of offices and salaries amounting to over $100,000 per year.

Probably the most contemptible part of this remarkable speech, was the effort at National policies, wherein he told in bland and guileless manner that the Republican tariff had caused the tobacco trust, and that the price of tobacco had been kept down by a tax levied by Republicans. If Mr. Lafoon or any other Democrat will prove this to be true, the writer will agree to vote for him. There is no tax on the farmers' tobacco, except as it might be caught for State taxes levied by Mr. Lafoon's party. No planter of tobacco would want the tariff removed, as that is just what the trust would hail with delight. It would open this country up to Cuban tobacco and enable it to ignore the Tobacco Growers' Association. Any effort to remove the tariff from tobacco or hemp would meet with a howl of disapproval from every Democratic member of Congress from Kentucky, and yet this demagogue, who is seeking to ride into office on race hatred and by reviving forgotten animosities, and opening old sores, would try to argue the farmers against the Republican party on a question upon which that party is standing by them like a stone wall. We dare Mr. Lafoon or any other Democratic candidate to go over the tobacco sections and advocate a removal of the tariff on tobacco. Farmers of Ohio county have not forgotten the Cleveland prices Mr. Lafoon.

MYSTERIOUS WOMAN APPEARS NEAR NARROWS

Travels on Horse. Followed by Numerous Dogs.

A vagabond woman, mounted on a nondescript pony and followed by a number of mongrel dogs, is attracting attention in the northern part of the county. The woman is described as very small, rather young, neatly clad and of good intelligence. She travels little, stops occasionally at a farm house and begs something to eat, and sleeps in any out of the way place that comes handy. She was arrested on a charge of larceny by Fordville police officials but failing to prove the charge she was released. The strange woman tells a story of her sisters being murdered two years ago and that she is searching the face of the earth for their murderer whom she claims she would know were she to meet him. While her story indicates a diseased mind she is said to be a woman far above the average intelligence, and it is believed she tells it for the purpose of exciting the sympathy of the people of whom she gets the scanty living for her unhappy self and leaderless animals. No alarm need be felt of the appearance of this strange creature in a neighborhood as she is just a plain harmless female tramp, with no other motive than to get a living after the manner of vagabonds. She claims to have been arrested ninety-three times, and she has been for sometime a familiar figure in Hancock and Breckenridge counties.

Miss Rowe Leaves.

Miss Edwina Rowe has gone to Champaign, Ill., where she will enter the University of Illinois. Miss Rowe will take a special course in kindergarten work. Miss Rowe has already had much experience in this line of work. She is a graduate of the Louisville kindergarten school. Miss Rowe was recently offered a position in a kindergarten in New York City and may accept a position in that city after New Year.—Owensboro Messenger.

HELM BRUCE ON TYLER'S PLATFORM

Learned Democratic Lawyer Treats Matter Fully.

Aspirant for Mayor Would be Menace to Home-Loving People of City.

"Friends of Mr. Owen Tyler, candidate for Mayor of Louisville on the Machine—which is the Democratic ticket—fixed up an acoustic for their candidate Saturday, in which the only feature of interest was Mr. Tyler's attitude toward the Sunday closing question. It makes Mr. Tyler favor the repeal of the Sunday closing statute, but what Mr. Tyler, as Mayor, could have to do with that question of State legislation is not known.

Mr. Helm Bruce in an open letter, printed below, treats this matter fully. Mr. Bruce says:

MR. TYLER'S PLATFORM.

The open announcement of Mr. Owen Tyler, Democratic candidate for Mayor of Louisville, that he favors the repeal of "the Sunday-closing law" is pregnant with a significance which every thoughtful man and woman should take time to consider. It cannot be lightly disregarded as "mere politics," or as a matter which does not concern the man of quiet life, who lives at home and takes no part in public affairs. It does not raise a political question in the ordinary sense of the term, like the question of the tariff, or the extension of American territory. But it is a matter which directly affects the home and the home life of the men and the women and the children of this city. Mr. Tyler's declaration is practically renunciation of a belief that has run through the whole warp and woof of American life, a belief that God lives and that His word is law. Does Mr. Tyler think that the "Sunday closing law" is written only in Section 1303 or 1321 of the Kentucky Statutes, and that the repeal of that Statute would end the matter? No; the Sunday closing law was set forth when the great moral constitution of mankind was written by "the finger of God" upon tablets of stone. It was written at the same time and declared by the same Almighty Being as the commands, "Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. The God of the Sabbath is the God of the home. They are alike sacred institutions, protected by the same divine authority. He who established the holy relations of husband and wife, and father and mother and child, and protected their sanctity by the commands, "Thou shalt not commit adultery" and "Honor thy father and thy mother," likewise at the same time gave the command, "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy."

In Kipling's famous song, "On the Road to Mandalay," the singer longs for a land "Where there ain't no ten commandments," but as yet it is certainly true that he who would find this coveted land must leave the shores of America. We have so long been accustomed to being robbed of our right of suffrage by those who fear not the law of the State that many have become indifferent on the subject; but we are not yet prepared to submit to being robbed of the Christian Sabbath by those who fear not the law of God.

The declaration of Mr. Tyler will bring to his support all the lawless and the Godless elements of the city. They know that under the laws as they are now being administered they are greatly restrained in their evil desires. In Mr. Tyler they will see their opportunity. They will combine to support him. They will not feel that a day or a dollar spent for him is thrown away. They will not simply wish him luck; they will work for him personally, actively and continuously all the day of election. I thoroughly believe that organized vice is stronger than organized virtue, but disorganized and lawless virtue is not stronger than organized and active vice. I therefore appeal to the people of this city, to those who love its good name, to those who love decent living, to those who love or even respect the Sabbath day, to those who, whether themselves professing believers or not, yet cherish fragrant memories of homes where the fear of God shed its sweet and refining influence on those who do not want their loved ones to live in a place "where there ain't no ten commandments," to all these I appeal to rouse themselves and prepare to resist a combination which threatens all they hold dear. To all these I appeal to form and execute a purpose, to make whatever sacrifice of personal ease or comfort, or time or labor, for labor or thought may be necessary to see that the man who favors the desecration of the Sabbath day shall not be elected Mayor of Louisville. HELM BRUCE." September 22, 1907.

Off for Jamestown.

Editor C. E. Smith and wife left Tuesday for Jamestown accompanied by Misses Cora Thomasson, Ethelyn Jones and Bertha Parle. Misses Thomasson and Jones being the winners in the contest recently conducted by the Republican, while Miss Parle goes as a guest, having gotten the second highest vote of any one in the race.

The party will be gone about eight days and will visit Washington city as well as the great Exposition at Jamestown.

FOR THE BUSY READER.

At Jackson Ed Callahan was arrested on a warrant sworn out by his brother, Roger, charging complicity in the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox. Callahan gave bond and was released.

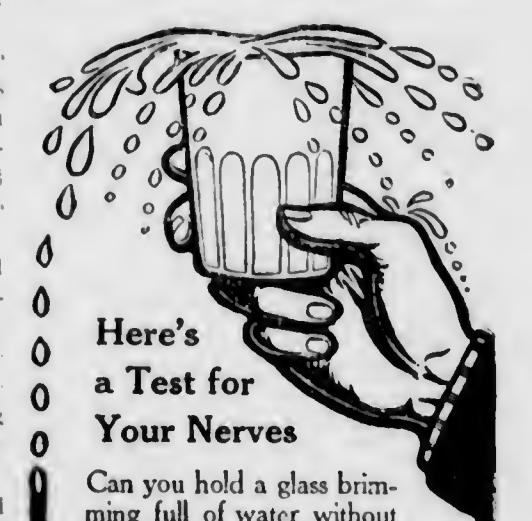

Oscar Konbert, formerly cashier of the First National Bank at Baton Rouge, La., is missing, while United States officers are searching for him with a warrant charging him with a defalcation of $50,000.

The influx of Chinese to Jamaica is a serious matter. One section of the press at Kingston is urging the Government to take steps to prevent their landing as being detrimental to local trade.

William R. Hearst has given out a statement in New York denying that he is a candidate for the presidency and asserting that he could not conceive of any conditions under which he would be willing to become a candidate.

The Jamestown Exposition directors have adopted resolutions honoring Director General James M. Barr and asking him to reconsider his resignation. It looks like a signal victory for Mr. Barr over President Tucker and the friends of the latter, and Mr. Barr has a working majority in the board.

George W. Leberth, Internal Revenue Collector for the Sixth Kentucky district, was found dead in bed at his home in Newport Tuesday morning. Death was due to Bright's disease and asphyxia with other complications. Leberth was only 41 years old and served in the Kentucky Legislature and been clerk of the United States Court in Porto Rico.

COMMONWEALTH ATTORNEY FRANKLIN'S PROMISE OF IMMUNITY TO TAYLOR

And His Opportunity in the Baily Precinct Matter.

Let Him Show His Good Faith by Insisting on Punishment for These Election Thieves.

A few days ago I saw published a very unusual order—therefore published—entered among the criminal orders of the Franklin Circuit Court at the motion of Hon. Robert Franklin, Commonwealth's Attorney, dismissing, or rather suspending, a certain indictment pending in that court against one who was a witness for a defendant charged with a capital offense, for the avowed purpose of relieving that witness of any fears of arrest.

I had the idea that any one, anywhere in the State, at any time, had the right to apprehend one charged with a felony against the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, without bench or other warrant, so long as the person charged had not been pardoned, convicted, acquitted, or put in jeopardy. Neither a Governor, (except by a pardon), nor a Judge, nor a Commonwealth's Attorney, may capriciously stay or paralyze the arm of the law. The witness, (W. S. Taylor) has never been arraigned, nor has he been seen in the hands of the court, nor even been arrested. "A private person may make an arrest, when he has reasonable grounds for believing that the person arrested has committed a felony." (Crim. Code, Sec. 37). So long as a man may be prosecuted for a crime, he may be arrested for committing it, and held for bail or without bail, and it may be confidently believed that the generous fund provided for that purpose in his case would tempt a test of the law on the question. Thus far in our laws the power of parole may follow conviction but not precede it.

The order mentioned does not recite that it was made at the solicitation of the defendant, or even with his knowledge. One is bound to conclude it emanated from the fertile brain of the gracious attorney of the State, and after being sufficiently advised, was granted by a righteous Judge. However, it is not the law of the State, nor is it a practice like cases, as something phenomenal that a Commonwealth's Attorney should go to this length to let a defendant, besides, with the exercise of these unusual powers of the court just at this time? Why did the generous impulse first seize the active, alert Commonwealth's Attorney now, instead of at some less suitable time in the long years of Taylor's imprisonment? Can there be a "stomach" of "conscience" as an unlearned wit once put it, in all this? Perhaps the thought, that this is but another way for the distinguished gentleman to produce dramatically on a larger forum "the ensanguined garments of the lamented Gochel."

Now let a suggestion—it would seem that the Franklin Circuit Court is in session—perhaps its grand jury has not yet been discharged, but even if it has been, a special venire could be empaneled. It has been charged, openly, notoriously, to the whole world in the columns of the Louisville Herald, a paper published daily in the city of Louisville, in an election precinct in the county of Franklin, known as "Baily," "Baily," at a State election in 1907, that State officers from Governor to the election officers, including all good Democrats in that precinct, did knowingly receive and receive cause to be recorded, the votes of P. Pear, A. Apple, B. Grass, C. Creek, H. Hickory, R. Raspberry, S. Spring, C. Creek, H. Shoes, R. Roof, B. Cap, H. House, W. Willow, A. Willow, and for further reference I would respectfully call attention to the names to be found on the first page of the Louisville Herald, of date September 14, 1907, and on the second page of the Louisville Evening Post of the same date.

However, and on the other hand, if after a full and fair and thorough investigation of the matter the charge in the newspapers mentioned be found to be false, then let an indictment be found against their publishers and proprietors for criminal libel. The charge is unequivocally made in those papers—in those articles, "that it is an undeniable fact that there are 219 votes in that precinct—the total vote of the precinct being 115 votes, but 219 votes counted for Beckham," under and in the circumstances before stated. However, the law fixes a mild penalty considering the gravity of the offense charged. It is a species of treason, more hurtful to civic respect in the loss of confidence in a fair ballot, than the offense of giving aid and comfort to a foreign enemy.

anyone for "falsely personating" A. Apple, P. Pear, B. Grass, R. Road or S. Sycamore, for neither of these might be able audibly to convince the jury that they had been falsely personated. "It makes no difference" (Mox-Nix-ouse)—es macht nichts aus) whether all voters be found "Der Loomp" (the lump) of them might probably do, and if not, Waldner, the election clerk, might suffice. It might not be amiss to suggest for witnesses the names of E. Elm, H. Hickory, R. Raspberry, S. Spring, C. Creek, H. Shoes, R. Roof, B. Cap, H. House, W. Willow, A. Willow, and for further reference I would respectfully call attention to the names to be found on the first page of the Louisville Herald, of date September 14, 1907, and on the second page of the Louisville Evening Post of the same date.

However, and on the other hand, if after a full and fair and thorough investigation of the matter the charge in the newspapers mentioned be found to be false, then let an indictment be found against their publishers and proprietors for criminal libel. The charge is unequivocally made in those papers—in those articles, "that it is an undeniable fact that there are 219 votes in that precinct—the total vote of the precinct being 115 votes, but 219 votes counted for Beckham," under and in the circumstances before stated. However, the law fixes a mild penalty considering the gravity of the offense charged. It is a species of treason, more hurtful to civic respect in the loss of confidence in a fair ballot, than the offense of giving aid and comfort to a foreign enemy.

Meanwhile, Mr. Franklin will be in the public eye, engaged in a matter of immediate and vivid moment to the voters of the State, as well as of Franklin county, and if indictments be found and convictions be had, independent of the party, he will receive the "well done, thou good and faithful servant."

However, if he let this court pass without an investigation he will merit and deserve the odium of all citizens who respect and revere the fair name of the Commonwealth. And, would it be too bold to inquire what's the matter with the learned Judge of the Fourteenth Circuit acting upon his own initiative in the State scandal in view of the open, notorious and outrageous character of the information cast broadcast over the State? MOOSE ATTACKS A HORSE.

And Horse Retorts in Kind, an Accident of the Maine
Woods.

Three young men from Milltown, near Calais, went out into the country districts recently to spend the day, and left their old horse standing under the shade of the whispering pines while they communed with nature some little distance away. They were startled by the neighing and snorting of their steed, and upon reaching the spot where the animal was tied they witnessed an exciting encounter between a bull moose and the horse.

The monarch of the forest just happened along and found the horse encroaching upon his domain, and very naturally resented the intrusion. He made a run for the unfortunate steed, and a bow-on collision was almost a sure thing when the old horse's fighting blood got up, and instead of waiting to be rammed like a fishing boat in a fog, he stood upon his hind legs and caught the bull moose a swat fair upon the nose with both forefeet.

Both animals sat down suddenly to think the matter over, the moose from the surprise of the shock, and the horse because he lost his balance, and it would doubtless have gone hard with the latter, which was encumbered with the harness and rigging, had not the young men set upon the forest king with yells just as he was about to resume the attack upon his helpless adversary. Any one who remembers the noise which a Milltown man is capable of making when out for a good time will pardon the moose for his sudden and undignified retreat.—Daily Kennebec Journal.

CANDIDATE FOR LIEUT. GOVERNOR

The Rev. J. D. Hocker is a
Raving Maniac.

First Attempt at Suicide Was Made at Livermore Three Weeks Ago.

The Rev. J. D. Hocker, Prohibition candidate for Lieutenant Governor, is a raving maniac at his home on East Fourth street, says the Owensboro Messenger. For some time past, he has appeared to be mentally deranged and Saturday became violent.

Mrs. Hocker is the mother of a ten weeks old child. The other members of the family have been sent away from home on account of Mr. Hocker's ravings.

"Well, Paul Barth committed suicide, and I am going to follow his course." This statement was made by Mr. Hocker shortly after the former Mayor of Louisville killed himself. Yesterday he made the second attempt to carry out his announced intention of self-destruction. He went to the drug store of C. F. Gillim and tried to buy a quantity of morphine. Dr. Gillim refused to sell it to him and subsequently notified several of the neighbors to watch Hocker as the indications were that he was trying to commit suicide.

After his failure to secure the morphine, Hocker went across the street into a vacant lot and sat on the ground. Several men who live in the neighborhood went to him and induced him to return to his home. He was violent during the entire day and was particularly so last night. He imagines that he is Lazarus in the role of Divers and calls constantly for water. Dr. C. J. Lockhart is attending him.

Hocker's first attempt at self-destruction was made more than two weeks ago. He became ill while conducting a revival at Livermore and the attending physician prescribed a very strong medicine, to be taken at intervals in small quantities. The bottle was left on a table in reach of Mr. Hocker and, when the attendants left the room, he drained the bottle.

The Rev. Mr. Hocker is a Baptist minister and is well known throughout this section. His home was originally in Ohio county but he has lived in Owensboro for several years. He has had charges at several places in Daviess and the surrounding counties and has done considerable evangelistic work. He was spiritual counselor to Roy Green, the negro who was hanged two years and a half ago for the murder of James Coons. At that time, he was editor of a paper called the "Truth-teller" and advertised for several days in advance of the execution that Green's full confession would be printed in his paper immediately following the hanging. It is understood that Mr. Hocker will be taken to a sanitarium to-day.

SHERIFF'S SALE.

By virtue of execution No. 112 Book 12 directed to me, which issued from the Clerk's Office of the Ohio Circuit Court, in favor of W. P. Brown against Josephine Layton, I or one of my deputies will, on Monday, the 17th day of October, 1907, between the hours of 1 o'clock p. m., and 4 o'clock p. m., at the court house door in Hartford, Ohio county, Kentucky, expose to public sale, to the highest bidder, the following property for so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy Plaintiff's debt, interest and costs, to-wit: $179.06 and $20.70 cost and the cost of making the sale, viz:

A certain lot or parcel of land on North Main street in the town of Rockport, Ohio county, Kentucky, known as the W. P. Graves property, leased by said Graves to Luther Rock and by Rock to M. J. Reddish, by Reddish to Nettie S. Hartford Business Institute.

A strong business preparation for a successful commercial career is now recognized as a necessity by every leading man. One of America's greatest business men said, "The young man who starts at this time will stand little chance of success without thorough business training." And for the young woman of to-day, the best safeguard she can have is a business education by means of which to earn her livelihood, whenever necessity demands. What could be more pitiable than to see a young woman in luxury, thrown on her own resources without a practical education?

It is no longer a question of getting positions for students, but getting students ready for positions. The demand is greater than the supply. While we have had a strong class of students during the past two years we have not been able to fill the demands that have been made upon us for competent bookkeepers and stenographers. Young men and young women with a good common school education have enrolled with us, finished the course and with their money making capacity greatly increased have gone out to positions of honor and trust.

Do you want to be one of this number of successful working people? If so, write us for further information. Catalogs sent free. Address all communications to Nettie Rogers, Principal, Hartford Ky.

A VERY POIS- ONOUS PLANT

Some of the Early History of Tobacco in This Country and France.

For a long time the tobacco plant grew unknown and solitary in the wild of America. It attained a height of six feet. The foreigners came here with brandy to get drunk on—a violent poison—and the Indians, not to be outdone, introduced them to tobacco—another violent poison. A fair exchange was made—the Indian got drunk on the white man's brandy and the white man got drunk on the red man's tobacco.

Prominent among the family of poisonous plants are the henbane, the datura stramonium and the tobacco plant. The tobacco plant is perhaps a little less poisonous than the datura, but it is more poisonous than the henbane, which is a violent poison.

Those who began putting tobacco dust (snuff) up their noses as a cerebral stimulant were first laughed at and then persecuted more or less. King James I., of England wrote against snufftakers a book entitled "Miscepanos." The meaning is "a hater of smoke." He also wrote "A Counterblast to Tobacco." Pope Urban XIII. excommunicated all persons who took snuff in churches. The Empress Elizabeth thought it necessary to add something to the penalty of excommunication—pronounced against those who used the "black dust" during the divine services, and authorized the beadles to confiscate the snuff boxes to their own use. Amurath IV, forbade the use of snuff under pain of having the nose cut off.

Thrifty France was the first country that thought of conceiving a

Crapaud said to M. Saureau: "Let us seek the means of filling the coffers of the State by a voluntary tax. Let us see about selling something which everybody will like to do without. In America there is a plant essentially poisonous; if from its leaves you extract an empyreumatic oil, a single drop of it will cause an animal to die in horrible convulsions. Suppose we offer this plant for sale, chopped up or reduced to a powder. We will sell it very dear, and tell people to stuff the powder up their noses."

A great reasoner was M. Crapaud. "The first time that a man will smoke he will feel sickness, nausea, giddiness and colics; but that will go off by degrees and in time he will get so accustomed to it that he will feel such symptoms now and then—when he smokes tobacco that is bad, or too strong, or when he is not well, or in five or six other cases. Those who take it in powder will sneeze, have a disagreeable smell, lose the sense of smell ing and establish in their nose a sort ducer. No useful plant could have withstood the attacks that were made by church and State on tobacco. M. Crapaud said to M. Saureau: "Let us seek the means of filling the coffers of the State by a voluntary tax. Let us see about selling something which everybody will like to do without. Who would have believed that the tobacco speculation would answer perfectly? The Kings of France wrote no satires against snuff, had no noses cut off, confiscated no snuff boxes. Far from it. They sold tobacco, laid up an impost on noses, and gave snuff boxes to poets, with their portraits on the lid and diamonds all around. This little trade has brought millions into the French Treasury. The potato, a staple article of food, was much more difficult to popularize.—New York Press.

A YOUNG NATIVE FILIPINO

Matriculates a Kentucky University as a Student.

First Member of His Race Ever Admitted to a College in This State.

The first native Filipino ever admitted as a student to Kentucky college matriculated the past week at Kentucky University. His name is Basilio Tuentos Osayos, and he comes from the village of Dao Antique Panay Island which is one of the larger of the Philippine group. He is 22 years of age and has been in the United States about three years, coming to Lexington from San Diego, California where he attended the public schools for a time. He is accompanied by his former teachers, John Christopherson and Richard Hellbron, both of San Diego, who have also come to Lexington to attend Kentucky University.

The three have taken apartments at 246 Rand avenue and the two young Californians are quite devoted to their dusky young protegee from Uncle Sam's far eastern insular possessions. Osayos has matriculated in the preparatory department of the University and his companions in the sophomore class.

Owing to the dark complexion of Osayos which gives him the appearance of being a negro and the fact that the Day law prohibits negroes in Kentucky from attending the same school as white students attend it was feared that some objections would be raised in regard to admitting him to the University.

Dr. T. B. McCartney, acting President of the institution was thoroughly convinced from official documents sent him from the government department of insular affairs at Washington which gave a full description of the racial antecedents and characteristic of the Philippines that there was not a drop of Negro blood in Osayos's veins and he was promptly admitted on the same equality as the institution has in past years admitted native students from Japan, China, Australia and other countries of the Far East.

In this connection it will be of interest to know that Kentucky University has a cosmopolitan student body this year, there having already been matriculated at that institution besides the Filipino, two Japs, one Syrian, one Dane, one New Zealander, six Canadians and twenty-odd Australians.

Osayos, the Filipino student, has an representative who called upon him Saturday at his apartments found him very communicative. At first sight he would be taken for a brown-skinned "darkey," but a closer inspection of his features will soon satisfy the intelligent observer that he is not a member of the negro race. Although as dark-skinned as the average Negro he has none of the features of the Ethiopian race, but looks more like a Hindu. He has not the thick lips of the negro, and his straight black hair, regular features and animated expression banish the suspicion that he has negro blood in his veins. He speaks in broken English, but distinctly enough to be understood with little trouble.

Osayos was one of a number of Filipinos brought over by the government to the United States after peace had been restored in the Islands as laborers with the view of testing them in comparison with the Japs and Chinese on the Pacific Coast. After working for a while at San Diego, and getting a smattering of "United States," as foreigners sometimes call our language, he began to thirst for an education and secured permission to enter the public schools of San Diego. He attended the public schools there one year, Mr. Christopherson, one of his companions being his teacher. He made commendable progress, attending school and working in the family of a physician for his living expenses. Christopherson became very much attached to his dusky pupil and when he decided to come to Lexington to enter the University Osayos showed such a decided inclination to accompany his benefactor that it was arranged for him to come also. He is quite happy with his two companions and notwithstanding his dusky complexion the three occupy the same room and no discrimination is made against Osayos on account of his color.

Mr. Christopherson, his guardian, relates a rather amusing incident which occurred a day or two after the young Filipino reached Lexington and which illustrates the race prejudice in the South. Osayos needed a hair cut and accompanied by his white companions came down town in quest of a barber shop. Notwithstanding his protestations that he was a Filipino, Osayos was ordered out of three shops and Mr. Christopherson had to finally come to the rescue and vouch for his nationality before the barbers in the fourth place visited would consent to give

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases. If we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has never failed to be the most successful remedy for liver troubles, constipation, indigestion, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. C. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of women's many peculiar affections, weakness and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. As is amply attested by thousands of official testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic troubles, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements caused by weakness, excessive use of dyes and kindred afflictions, often after many other advertised medicines, and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle wrapper.

him a hair cut. At one of the shops visited, at which several white barbers were employed, the barbers all quit work and sat down when he seated himself in the barbers chair. He does not however, seem to mind the embarrassment caused by his dark complexion and takes it as quite a joke that he should be mistaken for a man of African extraction.

Osayos was in the San Francisco earthquake and had a narrow escape from losing his life. It was after this catastrophe that he went to San Diego.

Acting President McCartney of the University and the students who have become acquainted with the lonely native of the Far Eastern Archipelago are most favorably impressed with his talents and predict that he will make good record. Osayos expressed himself as greatly pleased with the United States and is undecided whether or not he will return to the Philippines after he obtains his education. His father and brothers and sisters still live in the Philippines and he is naturally much attached to them. He remembers the recent war which resulted in the subjugation of the island by Uncle Sam and he believes his country will prosper under the government of the United States. He says he expects to take out naturalization papers as soon as his five years' residence in this country is up, as he wants to be an American citizen in the true sense of the word.

What Squirrels Eat. Squirrels do not entirely subsist on nuts, as most people suppose. They are largely fruit eaters and occasionally work big havoc in the orchards in the fall of the year. They are not above stealing partridge eggs and on this account are not beloved by the sportsman. Even poultry, when they stray, as they often will and lay eggs beyond the confines of the poultry yard, suffer from attacks of squirrels when the mother bird is away. In pine tree districts these little climbers are fond of splitting the pine cones and eating the seeds thereof. But above all things squirrels are fond of fungus. They will not have anything to do with the common or garden mushroom, but confidently devour the most yellow and poisonous looking toadstools that grow in damp woods and fields. They never store these, for they know well that fungi will not keep. They devour them greedily as they come to light and revisit the spot as soon as fresh spawn renews the kinds of toadstools that squirrels know to be poisonous and these they will not touch.

DEAF MUTES ARE TAUGHT TO TALK.

Affected Children in Philadelphia Have Worked Long for Speech.

Transformed from delicate deaf mutes to healthy, happy talkative children, nine graduates of the "Home for the training in Speech of Deaf Children" before they are of school age, at Belmont and Monument avenues will be among the great army of youngsters to enter the public schools of this city next Monday.

Years ago it would be called a miracle to make a deaf and dumb child talk, yet these days of development the teachers of the institution which was founded by Miss Emma and Miss Mary S. Garrett are doing just this very thing, and they are going about it with out medical journals and scientists ever noticing the remarkable work they have accomplished.

The children graduated yesterday from the home with delightful exercises and every one of the pupils who was sent there six years ago as deaf and dumb had a speaking part in the program.

Unless you spoke with the children it would be difficult to tell how well they can talk. Miss Garrett allowed the guests to converse with the children after the exercises were over, and when one woman asked a little boy ten years old how he managed to talk, he replied, readily:

"I watch your mouth. We are trained to know what you are saying, although we cannot hear. Every muscle of the face means a sort of signal to us. That is how we can speak with you."

Miss Mary S. Zane, one of the teachers who drilled the children for the exercises, explained how the children are taught to speak with their tongue. She said:

"Each pupil must ever watch our mouth. We tell them there is no such thing as a deaf and dumb child, and that encourages them to learn. Of course, the task is tedious, but within a few months the pupil can master the silent chords in his or her throat, and gradually they are able to make sounds. Then we repeat syllables over and over to them, and they must repeat them also. Within one year the pupil has partial control of the tongue and vocal chords, and then nature assists them to speak."

"Day by day we talk to them as we do to any normal person, and they become so proficient in watching the formation of our mouth and facial muscles that it is only a question of a year or two before they can speak so you can understand them. By the time they are ready to graduate, which is six years, they are prepared for the public schools even better than most children, for the training we give them enables them to know the value of speech, and they are ever trying to talk better."

Officials of the United States Government know that the home is the only one in the world of like nature, and it is no wonder that Miss Garrett was sent as special delegate of the Government to the international conference of teachers of the deaf, held in Edinburgh, Scotland, recently.

The ambitions of the home, which were also explained by Miss Garrett, places the institution in a class all by itself. Miss Garrett saw a deaf and dumb child, as he was called, in his home some years ago, being taught to speak by his mother. She thought it would be a blessing to afflicted children if they had a home to train them before they are of school age, and, with her sister, they found the institution near Fairmount Park.

Occasional headache, belching, bad taste in the mouth, lack of appetite and slight nervousness are symptoms of indigestion which, when allowed to go uncorrected, will develop into a case of dyspepsia that will take a long time to get rid of. A Word to Girls.

The woman who is indifferent to her looks is not true woman. God meant woman to be attractive, to look well, to please, and it is one of her duties to carry out this intention of her Maker. But that dress is to do it all, and to suffice is more than we can be brought to believe. Just because we do love to see girls look well, as well as to live to some purpose, we would urge upon them such a course of reading and study as will confer such charms as no modiste can supply. N. P. Willis wrote a very pretty paragraph on the power of education to beautify. That it absolutely chiseled the features; that he had seen many a clumsy nose and a thick pair of lips so modified by thought, awakened and active sentiment as to be unrecognizable. And he put it on that ground that we often see people, homely and unattractive in youth, bloom in middle life into a softened Indian Summer of good looks and mellow tones.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A WHOLE FAMILY CARVED FROM WOOD

California Man Surely Has The Most Remarkable Eccentricity Yet Recorded.

William Bennett, superintendent of electric lighting in Fort Bragg, Cal., has the most remarkable family in the world. From his wife down to his youngest child they are all carved from wood by Bennett's own hands. They live in a nice eight-room house, and dress extensively, for Bennett has plenty of money, and they wear jewelry. Naturally, they are the talk of the town.

There are many advantages in having such family as this one, for the wife can never quarrel with her husband, no matter how late he may return from the lodge.

The daughters can never elope, for their father has only to chop them into kindling wood if they become refractory in such matters, and as for the sons, if they refuse to follow their father's footsteps he has only to put them into the stove and they will help make the house comfortable.

While "Mrs. Bennett," as the neighbors humor Bennett by calling the highly-ornate stick that passes as his wife, has little to say, her husband dresses her in the latest fashions and has the best dressmaker in town to keep her up to style.

His daughters hold receptions, which the finest people here attend. The sons are well-behaved young fellows, and nothing has ever been said against their habits in any way.

Mr. Bennett is not an insane man by any means, but knows exactly what he is doing and why he is doing it.—N. Y. Herald.

Pillars Samson Pulled.

Recent investigation goes to show that strong man Samson really did pull down the pillars of the temple of Gaza, and allow the roof to drop on the Philistines. Prof. Stewart Macalister, who is now at work on the site of Gaza, has discovered the ruins of eight cities there, dating back to a period 3,000 before Christ. Investigation shows that the Canaanites, who lived here, were in the habit of sacrificing infants to some deity, the bodies being buried under the corners of the house-walls. It is believed these human sacrifices were the "abominations" of the Ammonites, denounced in the old testament. The excavations at Gaza show how it was that Samson destroyed the temple of the Philistines. The pillars were of wood, and they rested on foundations of stone, without being fastened thereto. The strong man had, therefore, merely to push these pillars off their supporting stones, when down would come the whole front of the building.

Ohio Republicans generally do their snapping between elections.

Both vote and pray against the proposed constitutional amendment.

A New York paper says "chorus girls are getting shy." Second childhood, we presume.

If Hartford has an epidemic of typhoid fever, remember that our skirts are clear.

"Is moonlight dangerous?" asks a contemporary, mildly. Perhaps, when served with a sweet summer girl.

"Democrats build penitentiaries, and Republicans occupy them."—Hooby Laughtoon, at the Court House, Hartford, last Tuesday.

Would Mr. Hager, if a citizen of Louisville, support Mr. Tyler on his platform pledging himself to a repeal of the Sunday laws?

What does the Hartford Herald think of Mr. Tyler's platform demanding a repeal of the Sunday closing law? He is the candidate of your candidate for Governor.

The Detroit Free Press wants to know what has become of the President's movement for an eight hour day for wives. It is probably on the shelf right alongside the movement for the simplification of spelling.

Every indication points to Republican victory in Kentucky this fall. Let members of the party take courage and do their duty. We are going to be assisted by an army of liberty-loving Democrats, who have grown tired of high taxes and machine rule.

In order for Mr. Hager to impress anybody with his temperance professions, he must renounce Owen Tyler the candidate of his party for Mayor of Louisville, who not only is opposed to the "lid," but has announced himself in favor of a repeal of all Sunday law.

Mr. Laughtoon repeated the old lie, that when Bradley was Governor every department of State was under Republican control. Every school boy knows that Kentucky has never been completely under Republican rule. When Bradley was Governor the State Senate had a Democratic majority.

The State Fair at Louisville last week was a great success, both financially and as an attraction of the first magnitude. Mr. R. E. Hughes, the Secretary, deserves special mention for his splendid efforts in behalf of the enterprise. He took the country press into his confidence to a greater extent than has ever been done before and there is no doubt but what the large country attendance was due to the liberal advertising in the country papers.

Making Good $3,500 Worth.

Hager says he made no promises to the "beer trust" when he accepted that $3,500 check from Charley Dehler as a campaign contribution four years ago. Of course, Mr. Hager considered it merely as a tender expression of affection from the brewery interests. In his innocent teetotal soul he never suspected that there might be any ulterior motive back of the gift. He took it in the generous spirit in which it was offered, and in like generous spirit speedily thereafter assumed the pose of a temperance leader and proceeded to make war upon his friends.

That is to say, publicly, and for the observation of the State, he played and is playing the role of an Anti-Saloon League advocate. Privately, and to the satisfaction of the "beer trust," he is trying to make good $3,500 worth. When the Governor appointed R. W. Bingham Mayor of Louisville with the express intent of enforcing the Sunday closing laws, and gave the local Democrats to understand that he wished Mayor Bingham's success in that capacity to be indorsed with the nomination, Mr. Hager began to get in his fine work on behalf of the financial backers.

Not content with juggling moral issues in the State for the sake of the temperance vote, he came to Louisville and did a few slight-of-hand stunts to win the liquor vote in the city. Employing the Machiavellian hand of Henry Hines, he put the knife into Mayor Bingham, who had given effect to the sentiment of the State by putting on the lid, and opened the way for the nomination of Owen Tyler, who now appears in his true colors as the open friend of the men who indorsed the $3,500 check. Thus is Hager making good.

After all, what the average politician promises is of little moment. He must be judged by what he performs. Mr. Hager may have given Mr. Dehler and the interests he represents no formal pledge, but Mr. Hager is responsible for the fact that the Democracy in Louisville now stands committed to throwing the saloon doors open on Sunday in defiance of the widespread temperance sentiment of Kentucky.

It would be interesting to know what further contributions Mr. Hager has received or expects as a result of delivering the goods.

It would also be interesting to know how much longer the temperance voters in the Democratic ranks will remain blind to the insincerity of the professions made by such a man.—Louisville Herald.

SMALLHOUS.

Little Eunice Alberta Drake, daughter of John A. and Eunice Drake, deceased, died at the home of her uncle James C. Drake, September 10, after a brief illness aged two years and six months. Rev. Lowry Tichenor preached the funeral sermon midst a host of sorrowing friends and relatives the following day at Equality. A precious one from us has gone. A voice we loved is stilled, a place is vacant in our home which never can be filled, though we must be submissive to the will of him who knoweth best.

Mrs. G. W. Barnard, who has been ill for several weeks, is reported some better.

PARDON MISSIONARY ACCOMPANIES HAGER.

Alleged That He Made Promises of Pardon to Relatives of Men in Penitentiary.

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 22.—"When Auditor Hager made his trip through Southeastern Kentucky," said a gentleman in a position to know what he is talking about here to-night, "he had with him a clerk from the Auditor's office, whose home is at Johnson county, and whose mission on the trip was a mystery."

"This clerk was a very busy man at many points on the route, an in many cases he was seen talking in earnest conversation with the relatives of certain convicts now in the penitentiary. This fact led some to whisper it about that he was Hager's missionary making promises to the relatives of men in the penitentiary."

"Hager was accused of having a pardon-missionary along, but he denied the allegation. The Auditor's clerk made frequent inquiries for relatives of convicts, and he found plenty of them."

BOOK OF BOGUS BALLOTS FADED AWAY

Famous Record of Voters in Bailly Precinct in Franklin County Disappears.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 21.—The ballot book alleged to contain the list of phony names voted at Bailly's Mill as charged in the Herald of Saturday September 14, has disappeared. It was placed in the hands of the County Clerk of Franklin county by Grant Roberts the same day the story was published in Louisville, but when Franklin came to inquire for it the book was not to be found. In less than a week it has vanished, after having been in existence for years.

This was the most sensational and significant fact developed in the inquiry before the grand jury to-day, the evaporation, disintegration, or incineration of the material evidence becoming known through the efforts of Attorney Franklin to secure the record in the office of the County Clerk.

PHOTOS OF WILD ANIMALS.

Some of The Dangers The Man Behind The Camera Encounters.

To-day the camera penetrates everywhere, and sometimes its use is attended with considerable danger and difficulty. Nowhere is this more pronounced than where the camera is brought into use in taking lifelike pictures of wild animals in captivity.

How hazardous this may be is shown by the following incident that happened not long ago at a big zoological garden abroad. A fine white leopard had been added to the collection and as soon as it appeared to have settled down, the authorities decided to have it photographed. It seemed to be a fairly quiet creature—nervous and timid, to be sure—but without any sign of temper.

When the keeper entered its cage it had taken little notice of him beyond the usual spitting and hissing natural to its kind. The photographer therefore followed the keeper into its cage without apprehension of trouble.

He set up his apparatus, adjusted it, took several pictures of the leopard and all seemed satisfactory. As he shut up his camera however, the operator chanced to shuffle his feet once or twice on the floor of the cage.

Like a streak of lightning the leopard, with an ominous snarl, leaped at him and before he could move, the animal was gripping his ankle with his forepaws and furiously biting at his foot. Lucky the keeper and some assistants succeeded in beating off the beast in time to save the photographer's life, but it was a narrow squeak.

At the same zoo, some time after, when an attempt was made to photograph one of the llamas—an animal generally considered to be a fairly docile creature, with nothing particularly objectionable about it beyond its habit of spitting—the photographer's "subject" revealed its true nature by suddenly making a dash for camera and operator, and before the latter could be secured he was the recipient of innumerable scratches, cuts and bruises, which took some weeks to heal.

One of the world's most famous wild beast tapers—Capt. Bonavita—was recently photographed with several groups of his lions, and the operator who took the pictures describes the experience as one he would not willingly repeat. It occupied altogether about three hours.

The remarkable feature about one of the group was that Bonavita sat immediately in front of a savage brute who had two years before attacked the trainer and crunched his arm in his great mouth until every bone in the hand and wrist was smashed. Bonavita had endured the most awful, nerve-racking suffering which ended in the arm being amputated, and yet he posed this dangerous creature in such a position that had he wished he could have crushed his trainer with one blow.

It is an open question whether seals and sea lions are vicious or not. They are certainly extremely curious and anxious to find out things for themselves, and a photographer who tried to take a picture of a group of performing sea lions had an experience worth recording.

He erected his tripod and camera and was about to make the exposure when one of the sea lions wriggled off his pedestal and made straight for the camera. It was all done so quickly that before the photographer realized it, the camera was upset and the sea lion was biting the man's legs and feet pretty sharply.

The trainer got him away, and no serious harm was done, but he explained to the camera man that sea lions often did a little biting to find out what an object was made of.—Pearson's Weekly.

Saved Her Son's Life.
The happiest mother in the little town of Ava, Mo., is Mrs. S. Ruppee. She writes: "One year ago my son was down with such serious lung trouble that our physician was unable to help him; when, by our druggist's advice I began giving him Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed improvement. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks when he was perfectly well. He has worked steadily since at carpenter work. Dr. King's New Discovery saved his life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure by all druggists. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Best Horse for Figures.
There has always been a sort of mystery as to why the bank clerk enjoys such comfortable hours. He arrives late at the scene of his labors, and departs at the scene of his labors, and Britain the banking hours are from 10 o'clock to 3 p. m. In the summer time one may see Mr. Clerk emerging from his place of business at the latter hour arrayed in the latest and most approved creation in the way of costume. Why banks should open at 10 and close at 3 we never knew for certain but there must be reason for the abbreviated hours, and the following explanation has been forthcoming: A long time back the bank of England discovered where mathematical errors by the clerks were at a minimum in the early morning hours, but progressively increased as fatigue occurred. The worst time was in the late afternoon and there was so much money loss, due to errors at that time, that as a matter of economy the clerks were forbidden to work after a certain hour. In France, the same law of sequence was brought to light, as was to be expected. There is a reason for everything, and it may well be that this explanation of the work is the correct one, for certainly working at figures is a most brain-fatiguing pursuit.

A REMEDY FOR THAT POSTAL DEFICIT

Franking Privileges Offers Large Field For Retrenchment.

If congress wishes to increase the revenues of the postoffice department and cut off some of the expenses which materially assist in producing a yearly deficit, it will not be necessary to attack the newspapers and increase the cost of the people's reading matter. They can find a splendid opportunity for retrenchment right at home.

This opportunity is presented in the matter of government franking. The house committee of postoffices and post roads estimates that yearly $5,000,000 of mail matter is carried free for the government, and the much larger part of this is carried for members of congress. A fertile field for economy is here presented, and if congress will avail itself of it and go vigorously to work cutting off and but a large part of the stuff of no value to anybody on the top of the earth or under it which is carried through the mails free that body will not find it necessary to undertake to impose onerous and oppressive restrictions upon newspaper publishers to swell the revenues of the postoffice department.

The franking privilege is as much if not more absurd than any other of the prerogatives of congressmen and with as little advantage to the people of the country. The idea was originally introduced from England in imitation of the members of parliament, which receive no salary for their services. If it is necessary to curtail the rights of the newspaper men to provide against the deficit, the general public would be more benefited by a curtailment of the abused franking system.—Altoona Pa., Mirror.

She says: "Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured me of chronic liver and stomach trouble, complicated with such an unhealthy condition of the blood that my skin turned red as flannel. I am now practically 20 years younger than before I took Electric Bitters. I can now do all my work with ease and assist in my husband's store." Guaranteed at all druggists. Price 50c.

SEASICKNESS CURED BY LOOKING-GLASS

Old Soldier Prescribes Novel Remedy For Neptune's Terrors His Domain.

A new remedy has been discovered for seasickness. An old sailor has proved that a pocket looking-glass is an infallible cure.

The looking-glass cure must be taken immediately the sufferer steps on board ship. The prescription directs the patient, when the first indescribable feeling comes on to take out his pocket looking-glass and look himself fair and square in the eyes.

The result is alleged to be that the rolling of the ship, and even the smell of the engines, will pass unnoticed, and a little perseverance will transform a bad sailor into a good one.

"It is a very curious fact, and one for which it is difficult to account," said a noted city physician, "that a casual glance in a looking-glass may arrest seasickness. It may be that the woe-begone countenance is responsible for introducing a vein of humor, and the sufferer resolves to 'cheer up.'"

"Personally I think there is a more scientific reason. It is well known that among sailors that the rise and fall of the horizon is responsible for the early stages of this distressing malady. Physicians in consequence often recommend their patients to try to fix their eyes on some immovable object, such as a ring on their finger or a book held firmly on the knee. The looking glass is probably the same kind of antidote to the movement of the ship.

"It would be necessary, of course, to hold the glass firmly and fix the gaze steadily on the reflected image.

"The looking-glass remedy may be something in the nature of a faith cure. If the attention can be absolutely concentrated on the image in the glass and all thought of illness banished there is an excellent chance that the voyage will have no bad effects.

"With regard to the length of time required for the cure, it is a general fact that if sickness can be successfully ward off for several hours the symptoms are not likely to recur, except in case where no remedy will relieve the unfortunate sufferer, and sea and brain sickness are interchangeable terms."

There are a great many people who have slight attacks of indigestion and dyspepsia nearly all the time. Their food may satisfy the appetite but it fails to nourish the body simply because the stomach is not in fit condition to do the work it is supposed to do. It can't digest the food you eat. The stomach should be given help. You ought take something that will do the work your stomach can't do. Kodol for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, a combination of natural digestants and vegetable acids, digests the food itself and gives strength and health to the stomach. Pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

Patriotic Reflections.

There has never been a time since the A. S. of E. first pooled tobacco, when the dumper was as uneasy as he is just now. He thinks something "might happen," and knows deep down in his own soul that if it does happen, he is the cause of it. His fear is unfounded, for the people who have made the fight in Equity so far, are not "parade day" soldiers, but are of that type of American citizenship that made Valley Forge glorious, that made the courage and determination of the Blue and the Gray the standard for all the world to gauge the efforts of men by and they will not falter nor waver in this battle for liberty until they ever lastingly conquer this great trust, which has not hesitated to take the bread from their children and rob their wives of the luxuries, and even the necessities, that were theirs by right has not hesitated to send old men, who should have rested on account of the years full of toil they had spent, back again to the fields to help what little they could to eke out an existence for a little while longer, then to go down to the grave with the thought that their children they had loved so well must yet live and suffer and pay tribute to the heartless corporation whose demands are measured only by what is in sight.

Oh, my dumper friend, well, you may fear a return to these conditions, for to fall now would mean disaster indeed for those of us, who are middle life and past, for it would take many years for farmers to make up their minds to try this thing again, and in the meantime the trusts would grow mightier and be better prepared to cope with a new movement.

Think, sir, what remorse you must know at your heart, when you would realize that this bright opportunity that had knocked at your door so loudly, was gone, forever gone, and just such weak-kneed men as you were responsible for its having gone.

EQUITY SOCIETY PLANS CONVENTION

National Board Settles Upon October 22 as the Date—Progress of Organization.

At a meeting of the national board of directors of the American Society of Equity it was decided to hold the fifth annual convention of the society in Indianapolis. The meeting will convene Tuesday October 22, and continue in session until all important matters have had attention.

Delegates from over thirty states will meet to consider the interests of all farmers in the United States engaged in every line of production, and make such changes in the constitution and present such plans of action as may be deemed advisable, after a careful consideration.

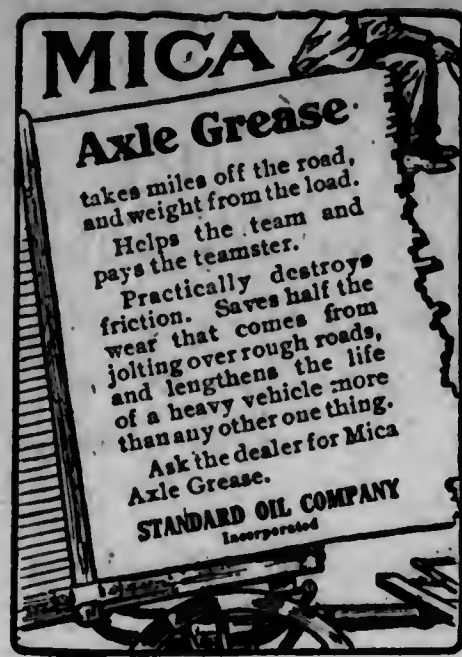

This is the farmers' organization which in the short space of five years has extended to all parts of the United States and Canada, and which has resulted in a similar organization being formed among farmers in New Zealand.

The setting of the price by the ones who produce the necessities of life and a price that is in keeping with the cost to produce them, an equitable price for both the producer and consumer, and the elimination of speculators who gamble in these same crops are among the chief aims and objects of this society.

Never before in history have the farmers shown anywhere near the amount of activity which has been displayed by them in the last year. Not only the wheat growers of the Western states, who have pledged their 1907 crop for the minimum price as set by the society, but growers of other crops, viz: beans, potatoes, peanuts and tobacco have pledged their acreage to the society plan of "controlled marketing."

"I have been troubled with a terrible headache for the last ten years; the doctors could do me no good. I saw Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills advertised in the Sunday magazine, so I thought I would try a sample. I did so, and they helped me wonderfully. I had headache so badly I could hardly see to work, so I sent to the drug store and got a box. In a couple of hours I was all right. It was the first medicine to do me any good."

SAW WORK OF NIGHT RIDERS.

A Citizen of Owensboro Makes Startling Revelations.

Says the Night Rider is Insepar- ably Linked With Tobacco Campaign.

A local citizen who is well known in Owensboro and Daviess county recently returned from a visit to counties in which "night riders" are accused of having committed many illegal acts says the Owensboro Inquirer He was asked many questions in regard to the acts and alleged acts of violence there and answered them frankly, but only on condition that his name be not used in any publication of the matter. He declared the charges were as true as if sworn to and the only reason for not giving his name was to avoid notoriety. His statement is as follows:

"Recently on business I had occasion to visit the counties of Trigg, Caldwell and Christian, with Cernican Springs as a starting point. Securing the services of a livery man I was driven some six or eight miles into the unorganized district, known as the 'Consolation neighborhood.' The liveryman remarked as I drove away, 'You are going to stay where the 'night riders' have been and you had better be careful how you talk.' I had on my person some papers that protected me from molestation, but everywhere I was looked upon as a suspect. To say that one sleeps well with doors barred, and a Winchester handy under the bed is a mistake and a sure guarantee for wakefulness. To say that their methods are not practical is a joke. First, missionaries of the doctrine of force, make school house speeches, ostensibly under the direction of the Dark Tobacco association, then come the 'night riders' fifty in a gang, and what the speakers failed to do, they accomplish as if by magic. Sign the pledge! Why the growers simply fall over each other in their hurry to sign. If our friends here of the A. S. of E. wish to learn some practical lessons though it be lawlessness, let them but visit the 'Dark Patch.' The mysterious part of the whole business is that when one 'signs' as they call it, he at once becomes a convert to the doctrine of force, and joins the great majority to 'burst the trust or die.'"

"What the end of all this will be no man can now foresee. Whether the state and the law-abiding citizens of the community can and will tolerate such methods remains to be seen. The idea is moving in this direction and, as a citizen who believes in the majesty of the law, not as suggested by law order leagues, or 'night rider,' I close this short statement by asking our countrymen to be careful what they do and say, lest we bring ruin to the cause we would help."

Weeds in Asparagus Bed.

"Is there anything that can be put on an asparagus bed to keep weeds and grass from growing, yet not hurt the growth of the asparagus?" is a question that is answered in Farm and Fireside by T. Greiner, who says:

"The best thing, I believe, is the hoe or other tools of tillage. I prefer the bladed stalks and hill up the rows in spring and work the ridges down again after the cutting season. This dispenses very thoroughly of the weeds up to July, but afterward it requires considerable effort to keep grass and weeds down."

Footnotes.

If a horse has been overfed skip one feeding, then give light feed for a day or two.

Lice on cattle while in the stable cause discomfort and loss of flesh. To destroy them sprinkle Scotch snuff along the backbone, on the top of the neck and about the horns.

Sprinkling lime in a water tank will prevent scum from forming on the water. When the lime loses its strength and scum begins to gather, wash out the tank and renew the lime. Twice in a season will suffice to keep the water pure and wholesome.—Farm Journal.

Ted's Beginning.

The new assistant rector was trying to impress upon the mind of his young son the difference between his own position and that of his superior. "Now, Ted," he ended, "I want you to remember to be very polite to the rector. We are strangers, and I am only the assistant. It becomes us to be extremely courteous. Some day perhaps I shall be rector myself."

The next day the boy was walking with his father when they met the disguised rector.

"Hello!" promptly began Ted. "Pop's been tellin' me 'bout you—how you're the real thing, an' he's just the hired man an' we got to knuckle under. But some day he may be 'it' himself, an' then you'll see!"

Chicken Obstinacy.
A police court story which is said to illustrate "the indifference of the average chicken to good advice" was told recently at Kingston, England, when a carter was charged with stealing a fowl.

"I am guilty of stealing the fowl," admitted the prisoner. "It was eating the corn out of my horse's nose bag, and I said to it, 'If you don't go away, I'll make you,' and struck it with the whip. When I saw it was dead, I put it in the wagon. I didn't know who owned it."

"I judge it was the chicken's fault," remarked the prosecutor, "and I'll not press the charge against the man."

Government Sends Out Demand for 18,000 Recruits for Regular Army.

In the form of a circular, urgent orders from the United States government at Washington for 18,000 men for the United States army have been sent to all recruiting stations all over the country and a special demand is made.

At present there are only 48,000 men in the regular service. The full branch of the army numbers 60,000. The demand for new men exceeds that of the large number now being taken into the service at the recruiting stations.

Sergeant Jacobs, of the Owensboro branch office, stated yesterday the hesitancy of the recruits was due to the small pay and that if Congress at the next session raises the pay 20 per cent., which there is a possibility, he believes there will be no trouble in securing good men.

The Owensboro recruiting station, since it was opened, has proved very profitable to the government. A sub-station has been opened at Fordsville.
